Present Tense Formation Summary in Latin

The basic present tense endings in Latin are as follows:

|            | Singular      | Plural         |
|------------|---------------|----------------|
| 1st person | —ô/—m (I)     | —mus (we)      |
| 2nd person | —s (you)      | —tis (you all) |
| 3rd person | —t (s/he, it) | —nt (they)     |

Latin has four basic conjugations, or categories, of verbs. There are also a number of irregular verbs, which follow some, but not all, of the rules for verb conjugation. The conjugations are categorized according to the vowels associated with them. First: —â, Second: —ê, Third and Fourth —îô: —i, and —î. The standard vowels in all the third person forms, both singular and plural, are never long. Although the lists on this sheet contain both singular and plural forms, we are concentrating on the singular forms at this point in time.

The Four Principal Parts of the Verb

Most Latin verbs have four principal parts. If you learn all four parts, you are able to create any of the over one hundred forms of the verb simply by applying the various standard endings to these four chief forms. We will concentrate on the first three principal parts in Latin I.

How to Name and Translate the Four Principal Parts

If we take a representative verb from the first four chapters, such as dûcô, this would be the standard identification and translation for each of the four principal parts:

|   |        |                           |
|---|--------|---------------------------|
| first person singular present active indicative | dûcô   | I lead                    |
| present active infinitive                       | dûcere | to lead                   |
| first person singular perfect active indicative | dûxî   | I led, have led, did lead |
| perfect passive participle                      | ductus | (having been) led         |
